

Directions: Tutors read and allow student to pop in to read the blue or red words. Words your student may be able to read independently are printed in BLUE ink. Words with a sound being introduced are in RED.

Now let's learn about the "th" sound.

Can you say, "th"?

We have lots of words that make this sound –

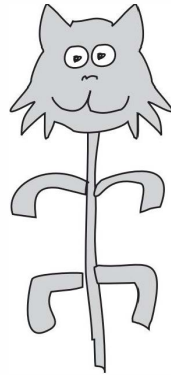

thanks for the
thumbs up!

think a
thought

th

My cat is made of tin.

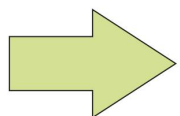

That's why he is so thin.

My thin, tin cat
will never be fat.

He will always be as thin as a pin.

Tin is a kind of metal.

th

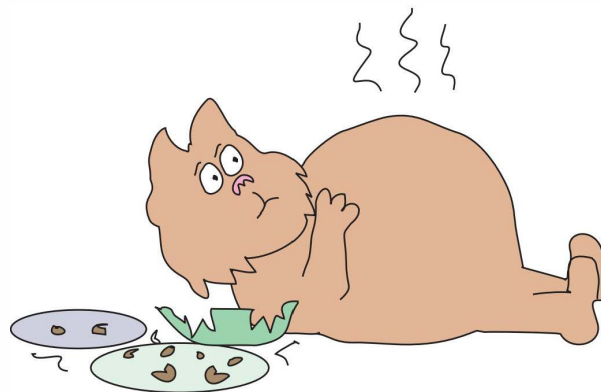

The word "the" sounds like "thuh"

The sun is shining
in the sky – the
moon is shining too.

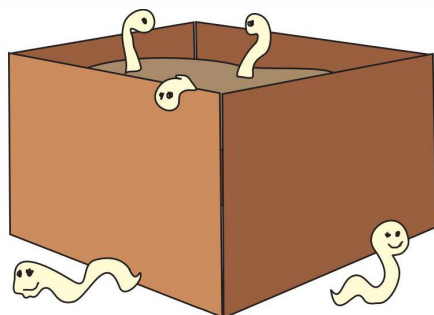

The sun is very yellow,
and the moon is a
little bit blue.

th

The cat thought
that he was too thin,
so he ate his dinner and
the bowl that it was
in. Then he ate a cake,
and then he ate a steak.
Then he went to bed
with a tummy ache.

th

I have a hundred worms.

I keep them in a box.

My sister doesn't like them,

but me, I like them lots.

I feed them cabbage, and

I feed them fruit.

What are some of your favorite
fruits?

th

If I had teeth, then I would brush them. And if I had hands, then I would wash them.

But I am a cup, and
as you can see, first
you take a drink, and

then you wash me.

th

This flower is red, and that one is blue. And that tree over there is green like me and you. And
And if we do not live in outer space, then why do we have three eyes on our face?

th

The dog in the bath is very good at math. He is better at math than I am.
He counts with his toes all the bubbles on his nose, and then he pops them, one,
two, bang!

th

I want this milk with

chocolate. And I want

that steak with cake.

I want sugar with my lunch

and honey with my tea

because everything I eat

must be as sweet as me.

Practice.....

This is my dog, and that is my cat. One
is thin, and one is fat.
The cat that is fat
is wearing a hat. The dog that is thin has
polka dot skin.