

Music Is My Community

I've been playing music my whole life. I enjoy singing, playing the guitar, learning music theory, and performing for family and friends.

1

Joining Local Bands and Choirs: I joined a local band and choir, where I met like-minded individuals who share my passion for music. These groups became like a second family to me, providing a supportive and encouraging environment.

2

Participating in Jam Sessions: Regular jam sessions at local cafes and community centers allowed me to meet other musicians. These sessions often turned into spontaneous performances, creating unforgettable memories.

3

Mentorship and Teaching: Teaching music helped me find mentors. It's a way to give back to the community and they inspire the next generation of musicians, creating a cycle of support and encouragement.

I find a community with music.

Music has been a powerful tool for creating community in my life. It has brought me closer to people, enriched my social experiences, and provided a platform for shared creativity and support. Whether through local performances, online connections, or collaborative projects, music continues to be a source of joy and community for me.

I find community through music. From joining local choirs and afterschool programs, workshops and classes, and online social media groups, I have found many different types of communities!
